LIFE AND DEATH.

When spring, in the order of nature makes its appearance and animate nature seems to be everywhere present through animal and vegetable life. the thoughs of a reflecting mind are arrested in their flights connected with the more direct affairs of life and its business.

A query is presented; why this change, that calls up apontaneous thought upon new surroundings everywhere present in nature? What does it mean that such a change should come with the spring season, continues to impress itself upon the mind.

Life is everywhere present, which seems to be full of joy and happiness, which tends to a conclusion that life and happiness is a normal condition of animate nature. When investigation is continued to ascertain the meaning included in the query why is it so? it is learned that life and happiness so abundant everywhere is environed by death, which only tends to intensify the query.

When investigation of life with its joy and happiness in the presence of death is entered upon, the theme presented by nature is followed, but almost instantly the subject is enlarged beyond the range of a finite mind. When there is given to the mind of the investigator a true view of itself, which destroys conceit by making known its nothingness in the presence of creation, then the mind is prepared to fully understand the language of David, "What is man that thou are mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him?"

of investigation that life is en environed by death there is very little encouragement given to the investigator to continue investigation in the presence of the enemy of life, but there is a desire remaining to learn more about

The next truth unfolded to the mind is that nature when engaged in furnishing the means of life it is with unerring certainty engaged in supplying to all animate nature the seeds of death, which revals another truth. which is, that all life has death in some inseparable. People are correct when they say that they know there is life and death, yet none have lived who have seen either. They have only seen or the principle of death is beyond the range of a finite mind. They cannot be understood by bodies subject to their dominion, nor can they be understood material body, that is within the range of suppore by the one, or that is within the power of the other to destroy.

in natural things, the range of the human minë is limited. One step upward takes it beyond its envorinment. It must content itself upon its level where there is more than can be learned in an average lifetime by the most active

The principles of life and death belong to the unknown or infinite, which explains the impossibility there is connected with a knowledge of these principles. Their effects teach us that the natural or material and the infinite are linked together and work in harmony subject to natural and infinite law, which harmony abolishes all thought of opposites in natural and infinite law are not opposites they are the same in essence, which establishes a principle in truth which is the same extending from one to the other serving the same in do it. Washes the same and it. Washes the same tural and spiritual worlds through law it is also established that all natural law is infialté. When it is ascertained that there is a conmention through law of the natural and the spiritual worlds, this article is expressed as he understands the connection of the known and the unknown through law. There connection of the known and the unknown, which to his mind is capable of demostration upon well known natural law principles.

Far From Ended.

Special to the JOURNAL.

LONDON, April 18.—The Blue Book, just publiched on the South African war, contains a dispatch from Sir Alfred Milner, dated Feb. 9th, in which he states that the war is far from ended, and that the struggle will be more wearing than believed. The publication of these dispatches fills the nation with gloom.

60ME MEN GROW ON TREES. the Bellef of an Indian and Some Other Tribes.

The Sioux Indians still share with the old Aryan and Semitic tribes in the forth human beings and others that bear various portions of the human body, and in the fourteenth century an Italian traveler, on arriving at Malabar, was told by the natives that the country abounded with a tree that bore men and women. The latter were attached to the limbs by the nether extremities and were full formed when the wind blew, but when the wind died out they soon withered. These specimens of humanity reached the length or height of three feet. In the first book of the Mahadharata mention is made of forms of dwarfs that were to be found on a large fig tree. The Arabs are still strong in the belief that somewhere in the southern ocean there is a tree that bears a nut that resembles the face of a man and when in its fullness the mouth opens and gives voice to the cry: "Wak! Wak!" The Chinese reverse the order of things and, instead of believing that the trees give birth to men, claim that in the beginning the herbs and grass sprang from the hair of the human family. They have preserved the tradition, too, that somewhere within the borders of the beautiful Flowery Kingdom there is a wonderful lake by whose margin grew trees whose leaves developed into birds and also that, if a jar be broken on the waters, birds of the most brilliant plumage will at once arise from the pieces and fly off. In central India there is a tribe called Khatties that claim to have their origin from a stick of wood. When the five sons of Pandu, the heroe whose exploits are told in the Mahadharata, had become simple tenders of sheep, Karna, their illegitimate brother, wishing to deprive them of their last resource, prayed to be gods to assist him. He struck the earth with his staff, which opened, and from it sprang a man who was called Khat, meaning begotten of wood, and by this name have his descendants ever since been known.—St. Louis Republic.

The nut trees alone of the work could at a pinch feed a population number of inhabitants.

LINCOLN WAS GRACIOUS. Invited the Theater Usher to a Seat

"I never was much of a Republican," said a gentleman who was born and reared in Washington, "but I loved Abraham Lincoln. He was one of the most lovable men I ever met. I was an usher at the National theater, and about two weeks before the assassing. tion John Wilkes Booth and Susan Denin were playing there. Mrs. Lincoin having expressed a desire to see them in 'Romeo and Juliet,' I was sent to the president's house to say that a box had been reserved. In the evening. Mrs. Lincoln being indisposed, the president and little Tad Lincoln came, and I showed them to the box.

"As Tad entered he turned and said, 'Come in, Lew.' 'Oh, no,' I replied; 'that would not be right.' Tad then turned to his father and said, 'Pap, you have no objection to Lew coming in? Mr. Lincoln, with a smile and motioning me to a seat, replied: 'No, Tad; certainly not for any of your friends. We will be glad to have your compa-

"I told Tad that my business would not allow me the privilege, and, thanking both father and son, I returned to my duties with a light heart and with an admiration for the president I have felt for but few men, and since that incident i have often recalled it and expressed my sorrow that he met with a death so untimely."-Washington Star

PARADE WAS A FIZZLE.

But the Ball Given by the Reno Wheelmen's Club Was a Success.

The Reno wheelmen were five years old yesterday. A crowd numbering a couple of thousand, came down town last hight to see the birthday celebrated. A huge torchlight procession had been billed, but it failed to materlelize.

True, there was the Mountain Eche band and hearly a dozen bicycle rider. rith saily decorated wheels. But that was all-if you except a score or two of small boys who cargled torches a block or two in the rear. "It is a great pity that the boys did, not stand in and make the affair the success it might have been. Well, the "parade" is now a thing of the past. Let's forget it.

But verything was evened up when the ball began to roll. The party was largely attended. The floor was perfect and the music entirely right. One thing that attracted a great deal of altention was aclub emblem seventy by iwenty feet, that adorned the ceiling.

COMSTOCK

Something About the Aggregation That Should Pack Mc-Kissick's Opera House.

The forthcoming minstrel production by Victimia City talent promises to be an event in local amateur theatricals. The boys have spared no efforts to make this a splendid performance in every particular. The first part will not only be a beautiful scenic arrangement, but will be lighted up with over two hundred electric lights. Arrangements have been made with the Flaraton people for the necessary power. The olio will include some very clever turns, the performance concluding with That Theatre Het.

The performance is constant at being the best amateur presented that ever appeared on the Commission, and it has been greatly revised and improved

INJURED BY FALLING ROCK

Pat Welsh met with a serious accident yesterday afternoon, the outcome of which will not be learned for a day or two. He was employed by the city in a sewer treach on High street. The trench to about seven feet deep. Near the surface was a boulder weighing a ton or more...While attempting to remove dirt from it, the hig rock was dislocated and fell on him.

His crowbar jammed against the opposite wall and protected him from the full impact of the ponderous atone and probably saved his ife. It was twenty minutes before his fellow workmen could extricate him from his position. He sustained internal injuries and was suffering greatly last night.
